

To whom it may concern

Date: 30 March 2010

Dear Colleagues,

The International Association of Universities (IAU) and Mykolas Romeris University are jointly organizing the 2010 IAU International Conference on Ethics and Values in Higher Education in the Era of Globalisation: What Role for the Disciplines?. It will be held at and hosted by Mykolas Romeris University (Vilnius, Lithuania), on June 24-26, 2010.

On behalf of the Programme Committee, we are pleased to invite you to participate in this international conference which will address the broad questions of ethics and values in higher education with institutional leaders as well as academics and researchers from all disciplines. The aim is to compare and contrast and, most importantly, to find commonalities and bridges between the various discipline-specific concerns and challenges when it comes to upholding ethical considerations and promoting values-based higher education. Underpinning the discussions and issues to be debated at the Conference, participants will be asked to consider how disciplinary approaches and experiences can enrich each other and contribute perhaps to a more global code of ethics for higher education.

We sincerely hope that you will be able to accept this invitation and that we will have the pleasure of welcoming you in Lithuania. We invite you to visit the following website <http://iauconference.home.mruni.eu/> and should you be able to accept this invitation, please contact Ms. Isabelle Devylder (i.devylder@iau-aiu.net) at IAU for further information.

Looking forward to hearing from you at your earliest convenience, we remain,

Yours sincerely,

Dr. Juan Ramón de la Fuente
